

ASTAC names new business development director

November 26th 1:46 am | Shady Grove Oliver, The Arctic Sounder

print  email

Arctic Slope Telephone Association Cooperative (ASTAC) has named its new director of business development and sales.

Thomas Lochner, who has previously worked in the telecom industry, was named to the position late last month, according to a release from the company.

"Over the past 18 years Lochner has amassed expertise in sales, product development, financial analysis, network planning and operations," spokesperson Ingrid Klinkhart wrote. "Thomas will be a major asset to the company's success as the Quintillion project propels ASTAC's transformation."

The cooperative is a member-owned utility that provides telecommunications services to community members across the North Slope Borough. More information can be found at www.astac.net.

Copyright 2016 The Arctic Sounder is a publication of Alaska Media, LLC. This article is © 2016 and limited reproduction rights for personal use are granted for this printing only. This article, in any form, may not be further reproduced without written permission of the publisher and owner, including duplication for not-for-profit purposes. Portions of this article may belong to other agencies; those sections are reproduced here with permission and Alaska Media, LLC makes no provisions for further distribution.